2002/0104067, does not expressly teach or render obvious the invention as recited in independent claims 1, 14, 27 and 41.

The prior art teaches one or more application modules [p. 11, paragraph 0105 of Lucassen], wherein at least a first one of the application modules comprises a first dynamic component [p. 11 – 12, paragraph 0107 of Lucassen] and a static component [p. 11, paragraph 0105 of Lucassen], wherein the first dynamic component and the static component are configured to function according to an initial set of requirements for the application [pp. 4-5, paragraph 0041 of Lucassen], determining whether the new set of requirements includes changes from the initial set of requirements [p. 5, paragraph 0060 of Green] and if the new set of requirements includes changes from the initial set of requirements [p. 12, paragraph 0150 of Green], generate a second dynamic component to replace the first dynamic component in the application [p. 5, paragraph 0060 of Green and p. 3, paragraph 0029 of Lucassen] wherein the dynamic component generator is configured to generate the second dynamic component to replace the first dynamic component [p. 5, paragraph 0060 of Green] by modifying or overwriting the first dynamic component [p. 5, paragraph 0060 of Green]. However, the prior art does not teach the dynamic component is a dynamic data model configured to function dependent upon the application data representation and according to a current set of application requirements in response to the user input, a new set of requirements indicates a change to the application data representation, and the dynamic component generator is configured to generate a new dynamic data model in response to the change to the application data representation.
